

NEW OFFICE

Knightsbridge in the City

Prime London property consultant Brompton has opened a City office to sell properties in Knightsbridge, Belgravia and Chelsea.

"So many of our clients and applicants work in the City that it makes sense for us to be on the ground near Bank as well as near our properties at Sloane Square," said director Ian Shelley.

"We want to make it easier for people working long hours in the Square Mile and Canary Wharf to visit us and discuss the marketing of their property, or to run through what is available on the market if they are searching."

Already well established on Sloane Square, Brompton opened the new City office to handle sales to investment bankers who live in SW1, SW3 or SW7, and who favour Knightsbridge as a home for their bonus money.

Ian Shelley (above right) was an equity analyst at Cazenove & Co in the 1980s. He qualified as a chartered accountant and has worked in stockbroking and fund management in London and Asia. Sales manager James Baring (also pictured) started at Baring Brothers before moving into property and now has 28 years of experience in prime London sales.
